POINT PLEASANT, Dec. 1.—Authorities today marked "suicide" beside the name of Jacob Heyman, 37, Newark racketeer, whose body was found slumped over the wheel of his car on a lonely road near Laurelton late yesterday. In his hand was a bullet wound, which the authorities decided after an autopsy, was "self-inflicted."

CARLISLE, Pa., Dec. 1.—(P)—A new clue to the mysterious deaths of Elmo J. Noakes, his niece and three "babes in the woods" cropped up today—a family feud.

There's been trouble in the family for years," said R. U. Noakes, brother of Elmo, in possible explanation of the migration across the continent of the five lonely figures, and the tragedy that befall them.

REPORTS GIVEN BY CHAIRMEN ON DINNER

Monday Designated as Last Day for Reservations for Affair for Sterner

Fred Quinn of Freehold last night told 50 members of the various committees planning the testimonial dinner to be given E. Donald Sterner of Belmar at the Berkeley Carver Hotel in Asbury Park Dec. 12 that tickets to the affair are going so rapidly that Monday night has been designated as the deadline for reservations to the dinner.

FREEHOLD, Dec. 1.—A verdict of acquittal was returned by a jury before Judge Harry Truax in Quarter Sessions late yesterday in favor of Mayor Sherman O. Dennis and three councilmen of Asbury Park, who had been on trial four days on a charge of violating the election laws in promising jobs in return for votes at the November, 1933, election.

The $2,500 bonds under which Mayor Dennis and Councilmen James J. Digney, Sidney L. Henry and Louis P. Croce have been under were discharged, but the bond of Dr. Joseph H. Bryan, president of the Asbury Park Citizens and Taxpayers Association, under a similar indictment, was held. No date has been set for Dr. Bryan's trial.

Though the actual trial had a dramatic ending, with Lester C. Leonard, defense counsel, charging that Judge Truax had displayed prejudice against his clients throughout the trial, and was biased, and motioned for a mistrial, charging that he had disqualified himself from sitting longer in the case, the jury deliberated only one hour and 25 minutes before rendering its verdict. Leonard's motion, however, (Continued on Third Page)

Bootleggers Profit Because Half of Today's Liquor Bootleg, Burnett Says

NEWARK, Dec. 1.—(P)—Bootleggers are thriving on the profit spread between the cost of producing liquor and the taxes which their legitimate competitors must pay, state Alcoholic Beverage Commissioner D. Frederick Burnett believes.

Burnett declared yesterday in a statement giving account of his stewardship in the first post-prohibition year. Fully 50 per cent of the liquor being sold in the state today, he estimated, is bootleg. Alcohol costs 20 cents a gallon to make, Burnett declared, but the federal tax of $2 and the state tax of $1 raise the cost of lawful manufacture to $3.20.

PAIR TO FACE TRIAL AS RESULT OF SHIP DISASTER AT SHORE

Officers Are First to Be Held on Such Charge Since Slocum Burning in N. Y. in 1904 HELD IN $2,500 BAIL FOR FURTHER HEARING If Convicted They Could Get 10 Years in Prison, Fines of $10,000

(Special to The Record) NEW YORK, Dec. 1.—Acting Capt. William F. Warms and Chief Engineer Eben Abbott of the Morro Castle must stand trial on charges of criminal negligence growing out of the burning of the ship off Spring Lake on Sept. 8 with a loss of 134 lives.

Both men were arrested last yesterday, as under subpoena, they walked back and forth outside the room in which the federal grand jury is reviewing the sea disaster. The two officers of the ill-fated ship are the first marine officers to be held on such charges since 1904 when the excursion steamer, General Slocum, burned in the East River with a loss of nearly 1,000 lives.

If convicted of the charges, Warms and Abbott face maximum terms of 10 years in prison and fines of $10,000. The warrants charge that because of negligence "the lives of upwards of 50 persons were destroyed."

Both men were held in bail of $2,500 for a further hearing Dec. 12. The bond was posted by a lawyer for the Ward Line, owners of the ill-starred ship, now a hulk on the beach at Asbury Park. "What's it all about?" Warms kept asking as he was taken before U. S. Commissioner Garrett W. Cotter to answer the charge. Abbott said nothing. The complaint against Warms charges that on Sept. 8, 1904, as acting captain of the Morro Castle, "unlawfully and willfully, by misconduct, negligence and inattention to duties," he "failed to take such steps as were necessary to provide for the safety of upwards of 200 passengers, and as a result of his misconduct, negligence and inattention to duties the lives of upwards of 50 persons were destroyed."

The complaint against Abbott charges that the chief engineer, by similar misconduct and negligence, failed to report to his station when he learned that fire had been reported on the ship and that because of his misconduct "the lives of upward of 50 persons were destroyed."

Francis W. H. Adams, assistant United States attorney who arraigned the two prisoners, said the (Continued on Third Page)

FREEHOLD, Dec. 1.—The financial affairs of Chief of County Detectives Harry B. Crook occupied the attention of the Naughtright Legislative Committee yesterday afternoon to climax the third day upon which the probe of alleged corruption in Monmouth County has been held within arm's length of the very office it is holding under the searching glare of inquiry.

Temperature to Drop About 20 Degrees Tonight

A drop of some 20 degrees in temperature in this city and vicinity by tomorrow was forecast this morning by William D. Martin, chief of the government's weather observation station in this city. Mr. Martin said that the drop would come during the night. Rain and continued warm weather were forecast for this city this afternoon, with a strong possibility that the colder temperatures tomorrow would usher in considerably clearer weather. The clear weather would probably be accompanied by strong southerly and southwesterly winds, he said. Warnings of the approach of a southwest storm were broadcast this morning at 10 o'clock to small craft plying along the Atlantic seaboard by governmental bureaus but the storm would not be of much violence in this section, Martin said. The excessively high temperatures in this city the past few days caused temperatures of 60 degrees to be recorded on the official thermometer at 8 o'clock this morning. This, Martin reported, was nearly 30 degrees higher than the normal temperature for the date.

PROPERTY SURVEY BEGINS HERE MONDAY

The State Housing Authority announced today that its enumerators will begin a real property inventory in this city next Monday. The enumerators will list the amount of real property for business survey purposes.

ON N. J. C. HONOR LIST

Those from Monmouth County listed on the academic honor list announced today by New Jersey College for Women in New Brunswick include: Alice Donnelly of Atlantic Highlands; Marguerite Regenhart, Rumson; Edythe Silberblatt, Highlands; Isabel Van Slyke, Ocean Grove; all of the class of 1935. Miss Dorothy Hallanan, Rumson, of the class of 1937, is also listed.

3 ADDED TO GYM CLASS

Three new members were admitted to the Y. M. C. A. men's gymnasium class at Long Branch High School last night, bringing the total membership to 19. The new members are George Howland, Robert Mulligan and Samuel Heimlich. The class will meet again Monday at 5:30 o'clock.

New Brunswick's City Government Flayed by Jury

NEW BRUNSWICK, Dec. 1.—(P)—New Brunswick's municipal government today stood charged in a grand jury's presentment with "negligence, waste, inefficiency, gross mismanagement, and incompetency." The grand jury, after a study of the municipal administration, returned no indictments yesterday but urged "a complete reorganization" of the city's management. The statute of limitations barred consideration of some aspects of the study. Hampton Cutter, the jury's foreman said, adding that were this not so "the result might have been quite different."

IT HAPPENED THIS WEEK

Monday, Nov. 26
Police strove to identify three little girls, apparently sisters whose bodies were found lying side by side on a remote Pennsylvania mountainside at Carlisle, Pa. Even the manner in which they met their death was undetermined. On the forehead of one of the children an autopsy showed a mysterious "Sign of the Cross" which had apparently been branded upon her.

Mayor Sherman O. Dennis, and three other members of the Asbury Park city council went on trial before Judge Harry Truax and a jury on charges of violating the state election laws. Councilman Sidney L. Henry, James Digney and Louis J. Croce are on trial with the city's chief executive. They are accused of promising the police court judgeship before their election. Testimony at the trial was to the effect that Eugene Capibianco was to have received the job. Dr. Max Silverstein, another member of council, testified he was present at a conference before election and heard the four officials definitely give their stamp of approval to Capibianco.

Italy openly defied Yugoslavia's attempt to investigate the plot which resulted in the assassination of King Alexander and Foreign Minister Louis Barthou of France, by refusing the extradition of two men. Yugoslavia claims to have knowledge of the slayings. Italy's court of appeals denied the extradition of Dr. Ante Pavelich, alleged terrorist leader, and his supposed companion, Egon Kvaternik. Both have been under arrest in Italy since shortly after the slayings at Marseilles.

A section of land in the frozen Antarctic, almost as large as the state of Texas, was claimed for the United States by Rear Admiral Richard E. Byrd, head of the expedition to the South Polar regions. He made the announcement of his discovery and claim in a radio message to President Roosevelt.

Col. J. Lester Eisner, of Red Bank, state administrator of NRA, and Harry Tepper, assistant administrators announced they were resigning their respective posts.

Tuesday, Nov. 27
Prosecutor Jonas Tumen went on the witness stand before the Naughtright Legislative Committee at Freehold to testify concerning his administration which has been under bitter attack at previous hearings of the committee. He said he appointed Harry Crook as chief of county detectives because he had confidence in him and because he wanted someone with experience.

The prosecutor, who waived immunity before going on the witness stand, told the committee he did not know of the operations of any gambling houses in the county, adding: "I did everything to suppress them."

More than 300 persons, including the heads of municipalities from all sections of Monmouth County, assembled at Belmar to pay tribute to Mayor Joseph Meyer of that city, who was elected to the board of freeholders in the general election.

Berlin heard that France was ready to submit the entire Saar region to Germany, withdrawing all activity in the region designed to influence the voters of the territory in the plebiscite in January. The Saar, before the World War part of Germany, is rich in coal regions and industry. It has been coveted by both nations and at the present time it is under the jurisdiction of the League of Nations.

In January the residents of the region are to vote on whether they desire to return to Germany, cede to France or continue under the rule of the league.

The quick action of Charles Antrim, milk truck driver, saved the lives of Mrs. S. Smythe, and her daughter, of Red Bank, after they had been overcome by coal gas. Antrim, peering into the house, saw the older woman lying on the floor, summoned help and then administered artificial respiration until a physician arrived at the house.

Wednesday, Nov. 28
Baby Face Nelson, one of the last of John Dillinger's notorious band of killers, was found dead along a road in a Chicago suburb, his body punctured by 17 bullets from the pistols of Department of Justice agents.

A half a day before the gangster was found, he had engaged with two others in a pistol duel with operatives from the Department of Justice and two of the government's ace sleuths were mortally wounded. They were Samuel Cowley and Herman E. Hollis, who died before they could be informed that the foe they had hunted so long had died at their hands.

Crime was also dealt another severe blow on the same day when the notorious Dutch Schultz, kingpin of racketeers during the Prohibition era, surrendered on income tax charges after being hunted for many months. If convicted, Schultz faces life imprisonment.

Arthur G. Hoffman of Rumson, an official of a chain store company, was named defendant in a $1,000,000 breach of promise suit filed by Blanche Anthony Messinger, Chicago concert singer.

Prosecutor Jonas Tumen continued on the witness stand before the blazing questions of ostial Stryker, counsel for the Naughtright Legislative Committee. He was questioned concerning the activities of known gangsters in the county during his term of office and was also called to task for the dropping of indictments against such characters as Al Lillian, Prohibition time gangster, who was slain in his palatial Atlantic Highlands mansion two years ago.

A federal jury in Camden convicted three men and a shore woman on counterfeiting charges after a trial lasting four days. They were Mrs. Florence Bennett of Point Pleasant, whose husband will be tried separately on similar charges; Frank Miller, a former state policeman; Charles Lloyd, alleged leader of the counterfeit band; and James Kittell.

Friday, Nov. 30
Common Pleas Judge Harry Truax heard himself accused in court of being prejudiced and biased against the four Asbury Park councilmen, on trial for alleged violation of the election laws. The charge was made by Lester Leonard, of Red Bank, counsel for the four, and he asked that a mistrial be granted. Judge Truax denied the prejudice charge. Meanwhile indications pointed to an acquittal of the defendants because of an alleged defect in the indictment on which they were brought to trial.

Prosecutor Jonas Tumen told the Naughtright Legislative Committee that numerous alleged liquor law violators were freed during his term of office through the nolle prosequi of indictments returned against them. Chief of County Detectives Harry B. Crook also went on the stand before the committee and was called upon to testify concerning liquor raids in the county.

Philip I. Phillips, who has been named before the committee as the collector of "protection" money which enabled known speakeasy proprietors and other law violators to operate without interference of the law, was taken into custody by internal revenue agents to answer questions concerning his income tax payments. He was scheduled to appear before the investigators with all his personal records next week.

Two county residents were killed in motor accidents over the Thanksgiving Day holiday. Mrs. Mary Lucas, 79, of Freehold, was killed when she stepped in front of a motor car near her home and Dennis Mahoney, a farm laborer, was killed as he walked along the state highway in Middletown Township.

A posse scoured the woods of northern Monmouth County for a Negro, believed to be the attacker of 79-year-old Mrs. Andrew Coleman of Red Bank. The woman was severely beaten on the face and head with a claw hammer.

John Hyman, alleged dope runner of Newark, was found dead in Point Pleasant with a bullet wound in his head. In one hand he clutched a pistol.

Knights of Columbus
Thomas Early, 105-year-old veteran fireman, who has been seen in fire department parades in this city and other Monmouth County communities several times, became a member of the Lakewood Council this week. He became the oldest candidate ever initiated and the oldest member of that organization in the United States. He received his first degree with three other candidates and will receive the second degree on Tuesday night, Dec. 9. Early lives on Laurel Avenue, Lakewood.

Three new members were initiated into Freehold Council, Knights of Columbus, at their regular meeting, Tuesday evening at their home on East Main Street. They were Fred E. Klipp and Bernard C. Blum, both of Cliffwood, and Randolph J. Wazlich of Rumson. The first degree was exemplified by officers of Trenton Council, as the first of the State K. of C. Ritualistic contest. The degree team was accompanied by about 25 other members of Trenton Council.

After the meeting, Grand Knight Vincent J. Dugan introduced the following members of the Trenton delegation, each of whom gave a

B. FIREMEN TO ENTERTAIN KIDDIES

Chief Tetley Will Help Santa Claus for His 25th Consecutive Year

RED BANK, Dec. 1.—For the 25th time in as many years former Fire Chief Louis Tetley will play the part of Santa Claus on Christmas morning to hundreds of needy kiddies who otherwise would know no distinction between that day and any other. The Independent Engine Company's Christmas Tree Fund will celebrate its quarter century of existence this year with distribution of toys, food, clothing, and fuel, as it has done every Christmas morning since the committee was first formed.

A plea issued by Joseph B. Asay, chairman; Charles Bennett Jr., secretary; and Willard J. Rupp, treasurer, of the committee, reads in part as follows: "You know our town has more families than ever, and Old Santa will not be able to get into all the homes on a single night's journey, so our good friend Morris Jacks has agreed to open wide the doors of the Carlton Theatre on Christmas morning so that all the boys and girls of Red Bank will have a chance of meeting the good old man face to face.

"For 24 years this organization has annually, by the assistance of its loyal friends, made it possible for every worthy kiddie of the more unfortunate families of this section to receive a pleasant call from Santa Claus on Christmas morning.

"All money contributed, every cent of it, will be used for charitable purposes. Not a penny will go to the company. The boys of Independent Engine Company donate their time and efforts gladly towards this worthy cause. Our honor and good name is linked with this enterprise. We count upon you to again help to make this Christmas a merry one for Red Bank's unfortunate through the efforts of this organization.

"All cash, checks, and correspondence should be sent to Charles Bennett, Jr., 53 Oakland Street, Red Bank, secretary, Christmas Tree Fund of Independent Engine Company, and same will be officially acknowledged in the name of the company."

The committees of the company, besides the executive already mentioned, are as follows: Theatre—Charles H. Bennett Sr., Harry A. Mack, and Frank Calandriello. Pots—Howard Stryker, Samuel Chandler, James Van Brunt, Fire Police—Jack Burnside, Minister and music—George G. Worthley, and Elmer Johnson. Lights and decoration—Willard J. Rupp and whole company. Oranges and tree—Charles H. Bennett Jr., Howard Stryker, and Morris Holmstedt. Food matinee—Louis J. Tetley. Toys—Jerry McCovey, John Calandriello, and Henry Ainsworth. Publicity—Louis J. Tetley, The Day—McCovey, H. Aldsworth, and H. A. Mack. Banks—Charles Bennett Sr. Boxing Bout—John Calandriello, Jerry McCovey, and Willard J. Rupp.

BAR ASSN. TO STUDY RATES FOR PHYSICIANS

ASBURY PARK, Dec. 1.—The Monmouth County Bar Association will meet in the Hotel Marlborough, this city, next Wednesday evening, Dec. 5, at 7 o'clock, it was announced today by Edward W. Wise of Red Bank, secretary.

Discussion will center around the proposed fixing of fixed rate schedule by county physicians, upon which action has already been taken in seven counties of the state. The filing would follow as a result of passage some time ago of the Physicians' Lien Law, which gives an attending medic prior lien on any judgment returned in a case where the plaintiff charged injury and had been treated by a physician.

County physicians have already formulated a list of fixed charges and submitted it to Common Pleas Judge Harry Truax for approval. Under the contemplated plan, charges for any specific injury, such as broken bones, etc., would be stipulated in advance and be standardized.

22 WHOOPING COUGH CASES ARE REPORTED

FREEHOLD, Dec. 1.—Forty-three cases of communicable diseases were reported in Monmouth County during the week ending Nov. 24, according to the report filed yesterday with the State Board of Health by the District Health Department here. Whooping cough was at the head of the list with a total of 22 cases. Chickenpox was next with a total of 11 and in order were pneumonia, five, scarlet fever four and measles one.

Long Branch reported all other county municipalities with a total of 13 cases. Oceanport reported five, Middletown Township three and Asbury Park one. The chickenpox cases were divided five in Ocean Grove, four in Neptune Township, and one each in Highlands and Eatontown. Freehold Borough reported two scarlet fever cases and Holmdel and Long Branch each one. The five pneumonia cases were reported one in each of the following municipalities, Avon, Highlands, Neptune Township, State Hospital Marlboro and Red Bank. The one measles case was reported in Long Branch.

BICYCLE RIDER HURT

SOUTH BELMAR, Dec. 1.—Owen Dunfee, a 12-year-old youngster, suffered a painful gash of the right leg here early last evening when his foot became entangled with the chain of his bicycle while riding the wheel near his home. Lashed to the Fitkin Hospital young Dunfee's wound was closed with five sutures.

ROTARY HEARS TALK ON THANKSGIVING

Rev. W. J. McConnell Tells of Fortitude of Helen Keller Despite Handicaps

The delivery of the club's annual Thanksgiving address by Rev. William J. McConnell, rector of the Star of the Sea Roman Catholic Church and a member of the organization, was the feature of the weekly meeting of the Long Branch Rotary Club at the Garfield-Grant Hotel yesterday noon.

In outlining to the members the reasons for giving thanks at this time of the year, Rev. McConnell dwelt briefly on the career of Helen Keller, born deaf, blind and practically dumb and whose case became one of world-wide interest a few decades ago. Describing seeing and listening to Miss Keller a few years ago at a meeting in New York City, Rev. McConnell said that the most gripping part of the meeting came at the close when Miss Keller, still entirely blind and completely deaf, stepped before the large audience and gave thanks to "Almighty God for all the favors he has given me."

"That comment," Father McConnell said, "is a Thanksgiving message in itself."

Father McConnell dwelt briefly on the abilities and opportunities offered those living in this modern age as one of the reasons for being thankful, describing the difficulties and privations of those living in other ages as compared to the safety, security and comforts of modern life. He told the members that they should be grateful for these blessings to their God and urged that the members of the local organization show their gratitude first by striving to learn God's teachings and secondly preserving loyalty to His laws. He closed by complimenting the members on religious tone of the organization and ended his talk by expressing the wish that the local club might grow to a "bigger and better organization, faithful and loyal always."

President Harlo Clark, who presided, announced that plans for the club's Christmas party would be discussed at the next meeting.

LOAN ASSN. BEGINS 65TH BUSINESS YEAR

History of Organization, Since Founding in 1869, Reviewed at Meeting

The Long Branch Building and Loan Association opened its office doors in the Garfield Grant Hotel building today to begin its 65th year of business in Long Branch.

At the regular meeting of the board of directors of the association last night it was recalled that the organization was founded on Nov. 30, 1869. The small group which assembled on that date opened their first office in old Washington Hall on Broadway where the Wagner Building now stands.

William R. Maps was the first president of the association and he was succeeded by James Lippincott, Jacob Steinbach, Sr., Thomas Slocum and B. B. Newcomb, in the order named. Mr. Newcomb is the present president of the association.

The secretaries, in the order of their taking office, were Matthias Woolley, Levi Bliss, Theodore Howland, J. W. Sherman and Mrs. Helen Covert, the present secretary. Mr. Sherman is treasurer at present, and Dr. William K. Campbell is vice-president.

The organizers included Jordan Woolley, James Lippincott, Jacob Garrabant.

Since its organization in 1869 the association has had only three solicitors. The first was John E. Lanning. He was succeeded by William A. Heisley, Benjamin P. Morris, the present solicitor, has held the office since 1886.

Dec. 20 the association will pay its 55th series of matured shares. The complete maturity will amount to $111,200, of which $91,900 will be paid by check to the shareholders and the balance in mortgages. The 102nd series of shares is now being opened.

The present board of directors includes: Lewis C. Brown, W. Stanley Bouse, Dr. William K. Campbell, E. E. Newcomb, J. William Procter, James Seiler, J. W. Sherman and William H. Woolley.

MARIE BRAGAR WINS HIGH SCHOOL HONORS

Named Best Girl Leader, Speaker, and Most Active Worker

Students at Long Branch High School have chosen Miss Marie Bragar for three "honors" in the "Trumpet," school publication's, popularity contest.

The students voted Miss Bragar the best girl leader; the girl who has done most for the school, and the best girl speaker.

Jerome Abrams was picked as the best boy leader of the school with David Field and Christopher Flannery as runners up. He was also chosen as the boy who has done most for the school. The only other student to win two "top" positions was Martin Brouse who captured the title of best dressed boy and best boy dancer.

David Field was chosen as the best boy speaker. Diamond Bruno was chosen as the most popular boy and Miss Anita Miller, the most popular girl.

James Gwathney and Catherine Harvey took all honors in the sport world of the school. Gwathney, who polled the greatest number of votes to be cast for any of the contestants received 168 votes more than his nearest competitor.

Frank Tomaino was picked as the school's "Romeo" and Miss Frances Harvey was selected as the prettiest girl. Della Burkett was named the best dressed girl and Evelyn Poole, the best girl dancer.

LEGISLATURE WILL MEET ON DEC. 17

Codes of NRA and State Recovery Administration to Be Made Similar

WASHINGTON, Dec. 1.—(AP)—A special session of the New Jersey Legislature Dec. 17 may bring an end to differences between codes of the NRA and the New Jersey State Recovery Administration.

Legislation has been drawn up, NRA officials said yesterday, which will come before the National Recovery Board next Monday for approval after which the New Jersey Legislature will be asked to act upon it in special session.

The attorney general of the state would prosecute all violations under the new laws, and state codes would conform with national agreements.

Rex Beach, NRA deputy in charge of state relations, said the proposed legislation follows almost exactly the agreement reached between Gov. A. Harry Moore and General Hugh S. Johnson, former national administrator, on Aug. 22.

That agreement provided that in codes of fair competition not affected by the executive orders of May 26 and June 25, the provisions of state codes shall not differ from those incorporated in the corresponding national codes.

Under that agreement all applications received by the state recovery administration for modifications, interpretation, or any other form of action or order under state codes would be submitted concurrently to the National Recovery Administration for consideration with reference to the corresponding national code. The disposition of such applications under the state codes would be made consistent with the disposition accorded under the national code.

FEDERAL MEN PUSH SEARCH FOR WIDOW OF 'BABY FACE' NELSON

CHICAGO, Dec. 1.—(AP)—The government's ace investigators pushed their hunt for Mrs. Helen Gillis, widow of George (Baby Face) Nelson today with renewed intensity.

There was a growing belief among some investigators that Mrs. Gillis is hiding out somewhere in the Chicago area, possibly dangerously wounded. This belief was based on the statements of some witnesses of last Tuesday's battle at Barrington, in which Nelson and Federal Agents Samuel P. Cowley and Herman E. Hollis were mortally wounded, that a woman, believed to have been Mrs. Gillis, had to be dragged from a ditch at the scene of the fight and placed in the automobile of the government agents in which Nelson's accomplice escaped.

A plea that Mrs. Gillis surrender "rather than face government bullets" was made public by her father, John Wawrzyniak, last night.

COMMITTEE PICKS BANK

OAKHURST, Dec. 1.—The Ocean Township committee meeting here last night in a special session, named the Long Branch Banking Company as depository for the Wickapecko Drive improvement account as required by statute. Chairman Hamilton Truax presided.

WILL AND A WAY

SPOKANE, Wash.—A motorist, whose name can't be used because he's married, picked up a figure in a fashionable dress, wearily trudging the highway west of town.

To his surprise his passenger doffed a woman's wig and revealed a man's garb beneath the dress.

"I've hitch-hiked from New York on my way to Seattle this way," said the traveler. "At first they get sore but then they usually laugh it off and let me ride."

"I'll be in Seattle by tonight," he said, pulling down his dress as he got out.

SCHULTZ TO SEEK FREEDOM ON BAIL

Former N. Y. Beer Baron Ridicules Reports He Feared Underworld Enemies

ALBANY, N. Y., Dec. 1.—(AP)—Arthur "Dutch" Schultz, former New York beer baron, intends to seek freedom on bail, it was reported today.

As an initial step toward freeing the erstwhile racketeer, his attorneys, James M. Noonan and J. Richard Davis of New York, were to confer here today.

At this conference, it was reported, legal steps were to be mapped to seek a reduction in the $100,000 bond which United States Commissioner Lester Hubbard has fixed.

Schultz, whose real name is Arthur Flegeheimer, ridicules reports he wants to stay in jail because he fears underworld enemies might take his life, his attorneys indicated. He believes his move for liberty will dispose of these reports.

Phillips Quizzed as to His Income

detective until the close of 1933. Other records showed he made real estate investments totalling $13,350 and through it all he maintained his only source of income was the salary he receives as head of the detective force.

The hearing was marked by a series of sharp encounters between the witness and Stryker with the counsel for the committee usually emerging on top and the climax came when Stryker, after listening to Crook disclaim the testimony of other witnesses as false, listed the names of members of the chief's own little "Amnias Club." He defined the word for the benefit of the chief.

Crook signed a waiver of immunity as had Prosecutor Tumen whom he followed on the stand. The prosecutor stepped down from the witness chair after spending all of Tuesday and Wednesday and the early part of today, a total of nearly 12 hours, answering the searing questions of the probes.

The long grilling as to Crook's source of income and his financial status during the past four years consumed most of the afternoon. Opening that phase of the inquiry he said that other than salary he had an income from his armored car service during the time he was a special investigator, amounting to about $150 per week, most of which he declared he used for salaries to employees. He had money due him from various places, but even after a long exchange, he would not say what the amount was. He said it was not $10,000, but when Stryker asked if it was $5,000 he said he didn't know.

The chief detective said he had money coming in from various persons to whom he had made loans but had no record of them. That remark drew from Stryker the aside that he was like Phillips in that respect and they launched into another of the many sharp verbal tilts of the day.

"I don't want a comparison made between Phillips and myself," Crook replied. "I can't help what he said. I'm telling the truth."

Phillips, sitting nearby, blushed deeply. He couldn't name any of his debtors but said one was a lawyer in Newark to whom he had loaned $250 and had been repaid. Given a few moments to recall some of the names he finally said he wouldn't reveal them if he could remember who they were for he didn't care to have the names of "decent" people drawn into the investigation.

He was certain he hadn't loaned any money to preachers because he was "afraid I wouldn't get it back," and was emphatic in his denial that he had ever loaned money to politicians.

His accounts were in the Asbury Park National Bank and Trust Company, the Asbury Park and Ocean Grove Bank and the Seacoast Trust Company, he said, until two of the institutions "stole" some from him.

Then Stryker mentioned the first of the long list of deposits. It was a deposit of $500 in the first named bank made on Sept. 12, 1931.

"What was the source?" Stryker wanted to know. "I can't tell you. It was honest or it wouldn't have been in the bank," Crook rejoined.

Stryker asked him to explain that remark and Crook said: "If I wanted to conceal it, I wouldn't have put it in the bank."

CRAIG WOOD SECOND IN MELBOURNE GOLF

MELBOURNE, Australia, Dec. 1.—(AP)—Paul Runyan and Leo Diegel today divided first and second prizes totaling $1,000 in the Peninsular Golf Club's open, each scoring 134 for 34 holes of play.

Torrential rains yesterday made it impossible to play two flooded holes this morning. Runyan shot a great 67 during the afternoon to clip three strokes from the par made by Diegel previously.

Craig Wood tied Ron Harris of Victoria for second place with a 75.

PRIMARY SIFT URGED BY PASCOE

"Why Wait Until Next Year?" Assemblyman Asks State Senator, Barbour

TRENTON, Dec. 1.—(AP)—Herbert J. Pascoe, Republican assemblyman from Union, urged today that when the 1934 Legislature convenes Dec. 17 it pass laws to shift New Jersey's primary election from May to September.

Last Tuesday John C. Barbour of Passaic, who has been selected as leader of the Republican majority in the 1935 Senate, announced one of the first acts in January would be to do away with the spring primary and said Governor Harold G. Hoffman favored the idea.

Today Pascoe sent a letter to Barbour urging that the 1934 Legislature take over the job. His letter follows: "May I call your attention to the fact that for the past two years I have sponsored a fall primary bill in the Assembly. Each year the Assembly has passed the bill only to be held up in the Senate."

"Assembly bill Number 27 of this year is now in the Senate. If we are really going to pass a fall primary bill, why wait until next year? The purpose can be accomplished by passage by the Senate of this year's bill."

Changes of Date in Indictment Cited

was not made in the presence of the jury. Announcement of the verdict of the jury of nine women and two men (the foreman having been excused from service after the first half day of trial on Monday) brought a round of applause from the audience. This was promptly squelched by two court constables who hurried toward the celebrators with admonitions, "Be quiet; be quiet!"

Leonard's tridate against the judge followed his amending the indictment on which the officials were being tried to fix the date of the alleged offense as of Oct. 27 instead of Oct. 14, 1933. State witnesses had testified that Edward Brodstein, now postmaster at Asbury Park, with three other Democratic leaders in that city had approached the men on trial and secured the promise that Eugene Capibiano would be appointed police magistrate in event of their election and fixed the date of the meeting as Oct. 14.

Defense witnesses, however, said that the alleged meeting of the officials with the politicians occurred Oct. 27, and at the conclusion of taking evidence Assistant Prosecutor Harold McDermott asked that the amendment be amended to read Oct. 27.

This was opposed by Leonard as "utterly unfair" to his clients and, notwithstanding the fact that McDermott withdrew his motion "to save time," Judge Truax said he felt the indictment should be amended and ordered the amendment made.

In his summation before the jury Leonard stressed the fact that, while now the indictment charged the offense as having been committed on Oct. 14, when the accused were not yet candidates, all state witnesses had testified that the meeting was held on that date and if the jury was to believe the state witnesses they could not convict his clients. McDermott, in a brief summation, charged that if the jury believed, from the testimony, that the illegal promises were made on Oct. 27 the jury should return a verdict of guilty.

In charging the jury Judge Truax said that the indictment had been amended by himself. He pointed out the opposing testimony but said that if the jury believed from the testimony that illegal promises had been made, as charged, but on Oct. 14, they should convict the defendants, but if they believed the illegal promises were made on Oct. 27, they should convict.

Dr. William J. Parks, Negro physician, Asbury Park, is scheduled to go on trial Monday on a charge of performing an illegal operation and causing a young woman's death. His trial was slated for Wednesday this week, but was carried over because the trial of the Asbury Park officials carried for four days.

The Parks trial will not be commenced until Monday afternoon, however, as Judge Truax will preside at the drawing of grand and petit juries for the December term of court. Three panels of petit jurors, of 60 each, will be selected, and the names of 25 prospective grand jurors will be drawn, the number to be reduced to 23 at the opening of the December court term.

COMPROMISE REACHED, PASSAIC VALLEY MILLS MAY OPEN ON MONDAY

PATERSON, Dec. 1.—(AP)—With the "closed shop" issue solved by a compromise clause, both sides today moved toward a speedy settlement of the strike which has kept 20,000 silk dyers out of the Passaic Valley mills since Oct. 25.

Negotiators reached agreement early today which shop chairmen of the federation of silk and rayon dyers and finishers were expected to approve this afternoon.

This will pave the way for reopening of the mills Monday—a far more peaceful reopening than had seemed imminent yesterday when employers threatened to resume production with police protection for "loyal workers."

Tug Sinks

DETROIT, Dec. 1.—(AP)—Swept by waves kicked up by a gale that tore over the lake district, the 24-ton steel tug Lakeside III sank early this morning three miles northeast of the Detroit River light in Lake Erie.

Her crew of four men clung to a section of decking and were washed ashore by wind one mile south of Amherstburg, Ont., at 4:30 A. M.

The boat, captained by Jack Metzko, was bound from Middle Bass Island for Detroit with a cargo of 2,000 gallons of grape juice. Just as it approached the mouth of the Detroit River a huge wave swept over it. The Lakeside III rolled over on her side and in 15 minutes sank.

Captain Metzko and the three deckhands who comprised the crew, George Mizia, Emery Johnson and Elmer Eberly, clung to wreckage and were washed ashore.

Three city fire companies were called out shortly before 11 A. M. today for two separate chimney fires, neither of which caused serious damage.

The Clew of the Forgotten Murder

BY CARLETON KENDRAKE

BEGIN HERE TODAY

When CHARLES MORDEN, reporter for The Blade, is found dead, DAN BLEEKER, publisher, employs SIDNEY GRIFF, famous criminologist, to solve the murder. Morden had been investigating the affairs of FRANK B. CATHY, wealthy and prominent, following the arrest of an impostor claiming to be Cathy and accompanied by a girl called MARY BRIGGS. The day following Morden's death Cathy died of poisoning. Griff leaves Morden had visited the apartment of ALICE LORTON, pretty and unemployed. He confers with MRS. BLANQUE MALONE, who accuses the pair of killing Morden, and they are arrested. MRS. BLANQUE MALONE, for whom MRS. CATHY and CARL RAINE, detective in her employ, have been searching, is located but refuses to talk.

Griff and Bleeker go to the hotel where MARY BRIGGS, now known as Stella Mockley, is staying. They find CHARLES FISHER, Cathy's lawyer there. The girl tells them the man who impersonated Cathy was PETER MALONE and that he frequently telephoned FRANK B. BLISS, Cathy's chauffeur.

Fisher leaves to question Mrs. Malone and Griff and Bleeker go to the office of EDWARD SHILLINGBY, killed on the night of the impostor's arrest. Shillingby's secretary tells them the man who hired Shillingby to shadow "CINCINNATI BOB" JAMISON, gangster, was Cathy.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY CHAPTER XLI

As the two men climbed into the taxicab Bleeker poured forth eager questions which, for the most part, the criminologist answered in short, terse sentences.

"What was Cathy's interest in Lampton?"

"I don't know," he said.

"Why was he poisoned then?"

"He took the dose of poison deliberately," the criminologist remarked.

"Why?"

"So that he would have an alibi." "An alibi for what?"

"Why, for his whereabouts when Morden was murdered."

"He knew, then, that Morden was to be murdered?"

"Yes."

"But why did he take poison to give himself an alibi?"

"He wanted to be ill in bed. He got an overdose of the drug he took."

"You mean it was administered to him purposely?"

"Yes."

"By whom?"

"That," Griff said, "remains to be determined."

"What are your plans?"

"We are going to try to prevent another murder."

"Mrs. Malone?"

"No."

"Oh, you mean the chauffeur?"

"No."

"Who then?"

"The young woman, Stella Mockley."

"Why should she be murdered?"

"Because she is too dangerous a witness to leave at large."

BLEEKER stared for a moment at the criminologist, seemed on the point of making some retort, then dropped back to the cushions of the cab and remained silent until the cab had taken a position in front of the hotel where they had located Stella Mockley.

"You've got your gun? The one that I gave you?" Griff asked.

Bleeker nodded. "Do we wait here?" he asked.

"Yes."

The men were silent for fully 15 minutes. Then Bleeker said, "But it's been proven that Cincinnati Red had a gray Cadillac coupe with a license plate number 2-1-1-1-1-1."

"Exactly," Griff said.

"Then it must have been Lampton or one of his men who killed Shillingby."

Griff shrugged his shoulders.

"I am very sorry," he said, "but I would much prefer to think. We can talk later."

"But," Bleeker said, "I feel that you owe me . . ."

He broke off as Griff suddenly shot out his left hand and gripped the publisher's knee. Bleeker followed the direction of the criminologist's eyes. Stella Mockley was just leaving the hotel, stepping into a taxicab which came forward in response to a signal from the doorman.

"Did you know that was going to happen?" asked Bleeker.

"I surmised it," Griff said.

He leaned forward and addressed the cab driver in a low tone. "Follow that other cab," he said, "but first let me get up in the front of the cab with you."

"What's the idea?" asked the cab driver.

"Never mind the idea," Griff told him. "It's important that you follow instructions. I want to be up here where I can see what's going on."

He climbed into the front of the cab. Bleeker leaned forward and said authoritatively, "It's all right. I'm Bleeker, one of the publishers of The Blade. This man is a detective."

"Okay by me," the cab driver said. "Just so I get the meter."

"You get twice the amount of the meter," Bleeker said. "But don't lose that other cab."

They swung out into traffic, moving at a reasonable rate of speed. The cab ahead turned to a side street and made time. The driver shortened the space between them.

Bleeker leaned forward and tapped on the glass.

"This is the same street where Shillingby was murdered," he said.

Griff nodded.

A CAR swung around a side street behind them.

"Pull into the curb as though we were stopping," Griff told the driver. "Let that car behind us get ahead."

The other car slid smoothly by with constantly accelerated speed. It was a gray Cadillac coupe with a dented left rear fender.

"Quick!" Griff shouted, springing to the running board of the taxicab. "Go after that car. Give it everything you've got."

He reached to the shoulder holster which was suspended under his left arm-pit and pulled out a heavy caliber automatic.

"Step on it!" the criminologist implored frantically. "He's got too big a lead."

The gray Cadillac drew abreast of the first taxicab. It swerved in to the right, until its right running board was crowding against the running board of the cab. The lone figure in the driver's seat shifted its position.

"Look out!" yelled Griff.

The first cab slowed. Flame spat from the side of the gray Cadillac. Griff pressed the trigger of his weapon. The automatic crashed out three shots. The taxicab in which Stella Mockley was riding was braked to a sudden stop. The gray Cadillac swept on, wobbling slightly. There were two more flashes of fire from the Cadillac, two more thundering shots from the criminologist's automatic. The Cadillac swerved sharply, climbed a curb, crossed a sidewalk, crashed through shrubbery, swung drunkenly back to the street, slammed against a lighting fixture and went over on its side with a crash.

Griff swung from the running board with the grace of a brake-man jumping from a moving railroad coach. He was just abreast of the first taxicab.

AS the criminologist's feet touched the pavement, the cab in which he had been riding swayed and swerved as the driver applied the brakes. Bleeker tugged with the catch on the cab door.

"Are you hurt?" Griff shouted to Stella Mockley.

She seemed as one in a daze. For a moment she didn't answer, then her hand fumbled with the door catch. Griff jerked the door open.

"He hit me once," she said. "I don't think it's serious."

Griff inspected the streaming blood. "Just through the upper shoulder," he said. "We'll get you to a hospital. You'll be all right."

She pitched forward in a faint, into the arms of the criminologist. Griff carried her across to the taxicab, put her in the rear seat.

"Stop beside that Cadillac," he said, and jumped to the running board.

The cab moved slowly forward.

"Listen, boss," said the cab driver, "I don't know what this is all about, but . . ."

They came abreast of the Cadillac. Griff jumped to the pavement. Bleeker was behind him. A figure lay twisted under the steering wheel of the wrecked Cadillac. Griff produced a flashlight. The beam struck the calm features. It needed but a glance to see that the man was quite dead.

"Good heavens!" Bleeker exclaimed. "It's Charles Fisher—the lawyer!"

Griff's voice was quick with impatience. "Who the hell did you think it was?" he asked.

There was the sound of a siren as a police radio car came roaring down the avenue.

"Around that corner and to a hospital," Griff told the cab driver, "and make it snappy."

(To Be Concluded)

In the next and final installment Sidney Griff explains several mysteries.

Rector Explains Why He Writes 'Gags' for Penner

The most extraordinary of Hollywood's many extraordinary comedians, because, as he says, "The prime function of religion is to bring health and happiness to all people."

Raynor, who is known in his rector at Atlantic Highlands as the Rev. Harry Rubel Scott sees no incongruity in his dual role, however, because, as he says, "The prime function of religion is to bring health and happiness to all people."

"I do not hold with those ministers who feel that fear is the best weapon of religion," declares Raynor, who helped in the production of Paramount's "College Rhythm," in which Penner makes his feature picture debut. The picture comes today, Sunday and Monday to the Paramount Theatre.

"I go on the hypothesis that when you get people into a happy jovial mood, that you can teach them more because they are more receptive."

Every man or woman wants to laugh, to have fun. Religion should meet that want. Religion does not mean only in the pulpit, but in everyday life as well. If a comedian on the screen or the radio can make some of the audience's life happier, then he is accomplishing more than some of us ministers who disseminate nothing but a gospel of gloom and despair.

"And, another thing, it is not necessary to be smutty to be funny, as so many think. A comedian who is smutty is only relying upon the old behind-the-barn method of shocking to get his laughs. The really big laughs are the clean ones and that is why Joe Penner has become a success and why Chaplin has remained popular so long."

"I have been criticized at times because I, an ordained minister, have put aside my church cloaks temporarily to write what are known in the show business as gag-laughs. But in my heart I know that I am doing the right thing. Because I feel that I am a 'missionary of health and happiness'—and the medium of expression makes little difference, be it a theatre, or church, as long as we help people live a happier, more clean life."

Raynor, or the Rev. Rubel, first launched into the profession of writing comedy lines some years ago when the mortgage on his church became due and there were no ready funds with which to pay it off.

The church was the fashionable St. Michael and All the Angels at Borwyn, Ill. And the young minister and his wife, the former Dorothy Deuell of the Zigfield Follies, staged a church show with their own lyrics, book and music, which was so much of a success that they succeeded in lifting the mortgage.

In order to supplement his meagre salary, Raynor next turned his talents to the radio. He developed a character called "King Kill Kare," who spouted a philosophy of health and happiness and mixed his laughs with Raynor's original jokes and music. The popularity of the feature caught on so rapidly that he was brought to New York by the National Broadcasting Company to broadcast from their key stations.

It was here that he met Penner. At that time just an obscure vaudeville comedian, Penner was booked for a single appearance on Rudy Vallee's big radio show. It was Penner's chance of a lifetime and he wanted the best gag-writer in the business. Raynor was his man. They got together and that single appearance won Penner his own program and the quickest rise to fame in radio's history.

Now they are an inseparable pair and their combined efforts are evident in the humor and comedy of "College Rhythm."

"College Rhythm," in addition to Penner, features Lanny Ross, Jack Oakie, Helen Mack, Lyda Roberti and Mary Brian. Norman Taurag directed the film which features songs and lyrics by Gordon and Revel.

NEGRO IS SLASHED ON THROAT BY ASSAILANT

ASBURY PARK, Dec. 1.—Marshall Britte, of Neptune, is highly indignant today. Britte, a negro residing at 212 Myrtle Avenue, Neptune, was promenading a local street Thursday clad in all his Thanksgiving finery and at peace with the world when an unidentified assailant slipped up on him and cut a deep gash across his throat with a razor or similar weapon.

Attendants at Pitkin Hospital where Britte was taken for a little fancy "embroidery work" to close the gash in his throat and another in his left hand volunteered the suggestion that Marshall's assailant has mistaken him for a Thanksgiving turkey and had tried to decapitate him in the time-honored manner; hence Marshall's indignation. Police are investigating.

Heavy bleeding from his wound resulted in Marshall's being taken back to the hospital where he was treated again.

NEW AVIATION GRADE OF GASOLINE ADAPTED FOR AUTOMOBILE USE

According to G. F. Appgar, local agent of the Gulf Refining Company in Easton, a new grade of gasoline hitherto sold only for airplane motor use has been adapted for motor cars. The essential advantage of this new product for automobile motors lies in quicker starting properties in cold weather, higher anti-knock and quicker warming up of the motor.

"Everyone knows," says Mr. Appgar, "that there has always been a fine grade of gasoline used for airplanes, but until now a gasoline of these characteristics, has not been available to the public. Gulf No-Nox Ethyl (Aviation Grade) Gasoline is considered by our research organization as the finest motor car fuel available, regardless of price. Its distillation characteristics now conform to those of U. S. Government Specifications for aviation gasoline."

In explaining the qualities of the new aviation grade Gulf gasoline, Mr. Appgar went on to say that in order to obtain quicker starting for instance, it is necessary to have a motor fuel of higher volatility and lower efficient air-fuel mixing temperature. This benefits the motorist by reducing the prolonged use of the choke and subsequent waste of fuel in crankcase dilution on cold mornings. In addition, when heavy traffic is encountered in city driving, making rapid acceleration essential, the new more volatile gasoline gives apld and even carburetion, yet it is stable enough to maintain efficient air-fuel ratio during sudden opening of the throttle.

Moore, Avon, New Jersey agent of the Standard Oil Company of New Jersey.

"In the development of this new fuel our pattern was Fighting Grade Aviation Gasoline with its slow starting features removed," Mr. Moore explained. "Because it contains a scientifically balanced proportion of each of three major constituents of gasoline—the light, intermediate and heavy ends—it has many distinctive features. In tests it gave 200 per cent more power than the best premium fuel on the market to date, started cars 54 per cent more rapidly and warmed up 11 per cent more quickly."

"Aerotype Esso, as this fuel is known, is so refined that each of these three most important fractions of gasoline are permitted to reach a maximum efficiency. The light ends give quick starting. The intermediate ends provide rapid warm up, instant acceleration and even distribution of fuel to all cylinders. The heavy ends, in the correct proportion, insure smooth performance and add to the power

Know your Groceries

DID you know that the speed with which a bread dough rises depends to a great extent upon the kind of flour that is used?

Did you know that the way coffee is roasted is as important in producing fine uniform flavor as careful blending?

Did you know that some shortenings can impart a delicious delicate flavor to the foods in which they are used?

As a matter of fact there is some very important information to be had regarding the groceries you use day after day. It is information that will guide you in improving the taste-appeal of the food you prepare. And by using this information in buying groceries, you will realize that there's genuine, tangible economy in paying for quality.

The storekeeper hasn't the time to tell you about the different characteristics of staples such as flour, sugar, spices, and butter. Or cereals. Or coffee. Or beverages. But you can find these facts yourself—right in your newspaper—in the advertisements.

Take time to read these advertisements. They are written in an interesting manner and the important technical points are clearly portrayed. THE LONG BRANCH DAILY RECORD

Financial Affairs of Crook Under Probe by Stryker

Stryker ran right down the list, stopping occasionally to ask the witness if he knew the source of the various items and Crook usually said it was the salary from his position or that he didn't know.

The item of $333.33 on Sept. 25 was salary, but there was another deposit the same day of $25. When Stryker mentioned a deposit of $300 on Sept. 30, Crook said he couldn't tell where it came from and added that he had not kept entries in his checkbook.

The list went on, and it read like this: Oct. 10, same year, $582.71 in five deposits, including a salary check, and Crook said he knew not where the others came from; Dec. 11, $333.33, a salary check and two deposits of $62 and $205; and Crook added that the latter two might have been for expenses; Dec. 19, $1,000 which was for a liberty bond he had sold; the chief declared; Dec. 19, $60; Jan. 18, 1932, four deposits totalling $215.50; March 1, $200; March 11, $200; March 21, $200; March 21, $100.

Crook interrupted the reading of the list by Stryker to say that he had taken $5,000 out of the A. P. & O. G. Bank just before Christmas of 1931 when the bank closed, and hid it, repositing it in small amounts as his confidence returned.

On April 9, it was $100 and on April 15 the same amount and then followed an item of $500 on May 5. Stryker wanted to know if he had kept it in a tin box or a sock.

Crook said it was kept in his home and Stryker resumed where he had left off. June 9, $200; Nov. 25, $146.66; Dec. 12, $400; Jan. 14, 1933, $100; Jan. 20, $100; Feb. 10, $300.

Crook said the money came from his earnings and Stryker asked: "legitimate?"

March 22, $50; April 6, $133; April 21, $100; May 25, $60; June 1, $200; June 15, $21. It was in silver and Stryker expressed the opinion it was just enough to load a small slot machine.

Crook said he didn't like the inference Stryker had made that the money had been turned over to the board of freeholders, and that he kept no records of the seizures he made.

Stryker stressed the point that only a slight amount had been turned over in numerous seizures and declared:

"I'm trying to find out what happened to the money that was not turned over."

"Are you trying to insinuate my men took nickels and dimes?" Stryker replied heatedly: "Any man who fails to keep records leaves himself open to just that inference."

It was during the questioning on that score that Stryker dubbed the witnesses whom Crook has accused of giving false testimony members of "The Ananias Club."

Crook denied emphatically the testimony given previously by Thomas Audley, city electrician of Asbury Park, that he had seen slot machines taken into Crook's cellar and the money taken out. The chief went on to score the witness as an ingrate because he, Crook, "had kept him all one winter," but Stryker cut him off.

"Then that's another witness you nominate to the Ananias Club?" the attorney asked.

Crook had earlier termed witnesses in the Gordon Still case perjurers or liars, including Merrit Kent, a member of his own detective force.

The still case was also touched upon again when Stanley Frazier, a jail guard produced records that showed that the two men placed under arrest at the scene and released the following day, had originally been sentenced to five days each for disorderly conduct. The records were placed in evidence as where the records of recognition produced by Fred Quinn, clerk of the court.

Crook admitted he had known that Al Lillien, slain gangster, was a rum runner, but denied any knowledge that he had ever been arrested for carrying concealed weapons.

Still another member to the Ananias Club was elected by the chief when he disclaimed charges of Sergeant Wilson of the state police that the prosecutor's staff had failed to co-operate in the Santanello murder case at Asbury Park two years ago. He accused Wilson of "passing the buck," because the trooper, in a report, said Crook delayed the investigation by getting a shave and by going into a huddle with detectives from which troopers were barred.

Asked to reveal his occupation before becoming chief detective, he said he was detective at the Monterey Hotel in Asbury Park for eight years and filled the same capacity at the Berkeley-Carteret for a time.

That led Stryker to ask him to explain the guards on the front porch with sub-machine guns and sawed-off shotguns and the signal, which when flashed twice meant that one of the officers on patrol was to escort a patron home.

It was all "news to me," Crook said, explaining that he got $45 per week of which he paid $40 to the guards.

A man named "Spears" hired him, Crook declared, and met him at the Berkeley-Carteret Hotel each Saturday night to pay him. He was never in the house and had no suspicion of the 100 cars that other witnesses said stayed on the premises until early morning hours.

"You thought it was a private residence?"

"Didn't you think it was strange that 100 cars stayed there until 4 or 5 o'clock in the morning?"

"I never inquired," "Did it ever occur to you it was a gambling house?"

"I am surprised to learn they had them in 1929."

He guarded other private homes in Deal he said and named them, and was then forced to admit his suspicions would be aroused if such conditions, at the present time, existed.

Crook said that following the first hearing of the house at a committee hearing at Trenton, he had mentioned the place, the caretaker of the place, who had told him one of his children might have left a toy gun on the porch. That would account for the sub-machine guns and sawed-off shotguns, he said, but couldn't find an answer when Stryker wanted to know if the children had also left a "toy" guard there.

Asked if he had approved a gun permit for Waxey Gordon, Crook denied it vigorously. He approved one for Irving Wexler, he said, but didn't know they were the same person. He also denied he knew Gordon kept an apartment at the Berkeley-Carteret Hotel and that he had been in it.

He chased all gangsters out of the county, he said, when Stryker pressed the questions as to the presence of gangsters in the county named Vanny Higgins and his lieutenants, as racketeers he had told that was "not healthy" to stay. He was then forced to admit he hadn't known Max Hassel and Max Greenberg, who also got gun permits, were not gangsters until after they had been killed in Elizabeth.

In an early reference to his parking place at the kennel club, Crook said it was operated by his sons. Admitting he had made the investment he said he took "a gamble and lost."

Crook could throw no more light on the slot machine situation than had Prosecutor Tumen saying simply that the money had been turned over to the board of freeholders, and that he kept no records of the seizures he made.

Stryker stressed the point that only a slight amount had been turned over in numerous seizures and declared:

"I'm trying to find out what happened to the money that was not turned over."

"Are you trying to insinuate my men took nickels and dimes?" Stryker replied heatedly: "Any man who fails to keep records leaves himself open to just that inference."

chief when he disclaimed charges of Sergeant Wilson of the state police that the prosecutor's staff had failed to co-operate in the Santanello murder case at Asbury Park two years ago. He accused Wilson of "passing the buck," because the trooper, in a report, said Crook delayed the investigation by getting a shave and by going into a huddle with detectives from which troopers were barred.

Asked to reveal his occupation before becoming chief detective, he said he was detective at the Monterey Hotel in Asbury Park for eight years and filled the same capacity at the Berkeley-Carteret for a time.

That led Stryker to ask him to explain the guards on the front porch with sub-machine guns and sawed-off shotguns and the signal, which when flashed twice meant that one of the officers on patrol was to escort a patron home.

It was all "news to me," Crook said, explaining that he got $45 per week of which he paid $40 to the guards.

A man named "Spears" hired him, Crook declared, and met him at the Berkeley-Carteret Hotel each Saturday night to pay him. He was never in the house and had no suspicion of the 100 cars that other witnesses said stayed on the premises until early morning hours.

"You thought it was a private residence?"

"At the time."

ACTION IN THE MORRO CASTLE INVESTIGATION

Criticism by a alert public press of efforts to whitewash the Morro Castle disaster of Spring Lake, in which 134 persons met their death when the palatial liner burned, has resulted in a decisive move on the part of authorities in the arrest of Acting Captain Warmis and Chief Engineer Abbott on charges of willful neglect of duty.

Captain Warmis, it will be remembered, was so confused during the fire that he absolutely failed to make the slightest effort to preserve order among passengers or to encourage his crew members to stick to their posts. Members of the crew, incidentally, were first to leave the doomed ship as she wallowed in a storm-tossed sea 12 miles off shore. Abbott, testimony taken at the inquiry indicated, was discovered hiding in a lifeboat.

At last the government seems to have realized that an outraged public will not tolerate laxness in supervision of steamships plying trade routes on the high seas. President Roosevelt in a desperate attempt to divert attention from the disaster appointed Captain Fried, famous rescuer, to head the steamboat inspection service in New York where careless officials allowed the Morro Castle to embark on that ill-fated cruise.

There are good and sufficient reasons why Captain Warmis and Abbott should be brought to book for their conduct during the tragedy—an emergency deserving of their every attention. The fact that members of the crew deserted the ship and left passengers to die, and were permitted to do so by Captain Warmis, is indicative of criminal neglect of duty and should result in the two officers appearing in a court of law to prove their innocence in the death of passengers who could have been saved if the first officer had made a serious effort to bring order out of the chaos which raged on the decks of the burning Morro Castle.

A BILLION DOLLAR TRADE

Manuel L. Quezon, slated to be president of the Philippine commonwealth next year, tells interviewers in Baltimore that he will do his utmost to help American business men retain their present $1,000,000,000 market in the islands after independence goes into effect.

But he points out, also, that whether this market is kept depends chiefly on the American Congress. The Philippine government, he says, will protect the United States with quotas or tariffs if assured of preferential entry into the American market for Philippine goods.

This trade with the islands is large enough to be well worth keeping. It can be kept, as Mr. Quezon says, if we approach the problem intelligently.

It should not be too hard to find a way of doing it without, at the same time, working any injustice on American producers.

PUBLIC POWERS WINS AGAIN

The people of Memphis, Tenn., seem to have been about as thoroughly sold on the merits of publicly owned and distributed electric power as any people could possibly be.

At the recent election, the voters of Memphis were asked to approve a $9,000,000 bond issue to acquire an electric distribution system for TVA power. By the amazing vote of 33,476 to 1,943 the bond issue was carried.

Not only is this an unprecedented majority for approval of a bond issue—especially at this moment, when voters are loath to saddle local governments with new obligations—but the affirmative vote was nearly 10,000 above the total vote ordinarily cast in a Memphis election.

Whatever the rest of the country may think of the TVA plan, Memphis evidently is heartily in favor of it.

SEA SERPENT AGAIN!

It seems that there was something in those stories of a sea serpent in British Columbia, after all. The remains of some queer sort of animal have been found, and it is to be hoped that enough is left to enable scientists to tell us just what the creature was, in life.

Probably 90 per cent of all sea serpent stories are pure fable. But now and then one is forced to suspect that where there is so much smoke there must be at least a little smudge of a fire.

A British naval officer not long ago wrote a book in which he revived practically all sea serpent tales of modern times; and he boldly concluded that the seas do hold some sort of out-of-date monster, a holdover from the misty ages of pre-history, which men glimpse from a distance now and then.

Few things would be more interesting than to get genuine confirmation of this belief. May the British Columbia scientists have good luck in their research!

WORLD WAR IN MINIATURE

That long-drawn-out, confused, and bloody little war between Bolivia and Paraguay seems to be furnishing an admirable laboratory specimen of the real thing. What happens in great wars is depicted here, in miniature, and the spectacle is an instructive one.

A two-paragraph dispatch from La Paz, Bolivia, is an example. This story began by remarking that Bolivia has now enrolled its 18-year-old conscripts, not due for service until 1936. Then it added that the Bolivian army had won a smashing victory, inflicting losses of 15,000 men on their opponents; and the story closed with a reminder of simultaneous claims of a sweeping victory by the Paraguayans.

Modern war is epitomized in that little story. Heavy losses, conflicting claims of victory—and the grim summoning of 18-year-olds to the colors!

Huey Long's state policemen, guarding his personally conducted rab-rab expeditionary force, were admitted to Tennessee as game wardens "to guard wild life." It wasn't the open season for migratory geese.

Federal government being urged to assume control of truck traffic. First thing to do is arrange that they'll pull over to the right when we want to pass.

Latest test got the U. S. fleet through Panama Canal faster than ever before. In other words, the fleet is getting flecter.

A BIBLE THOUGHT FOR TODAY

IT TO OBEY: If ye will obey my voice indeed, and keep my covenant, then ye shall be a peculiar treasure unto me above all people: for all the earth is mine: and ye shall be unto me a kingdom of priests, and a holy nation.—Exodus 19:5, 6.

SEEN and HEARD

By DOROTHY DORAN

Police Patrol

Since the phrase, "Calling all cars!" coming out of the ether on s'ri-wave radio is the understood signal for need of police protection somewhere within the district, it might be interesting to relate an incident of constabular communication in Long Branch 50 years ago. Wealthy residents of this locality in 1884 were both interested and happy at the installation that year of the new district messenger service which permitted subscribers to call for messenger, physician or policeman should the need arise. On a Sunday night in July of that year the first alarm ever the new service lines buzzed into the central office of the local police department from the Rothschild cottage in West End. P. H. Casey of the department, whose efforts were largely instrumental in effecting the installation of the new-fangled alarm, thought it his due to answer this first call. Hastily buckling on a brace of pistols and tucking a husky club under his belt, he mounted his trusty bicycle and started scorching the roads toward the location of the crime-alarm, stopping just long enough enroute to leave word for W. G. Irving, noted United States detective, then staying at the West End Hotel, to follow him as soon as possible. Arriving at the Rothschild residence a bit later, warm and out of breath, Casey allowed his trusty "bike" to clatter to the ground and clutching his club in one hand and one of the revolvers in the other, ran up the walk to the front door. He was met at the entrance by a trimly uniformed maid of foreign extraction who seemed extremely startled at the apparition of an armed man insisting on admission. Giving vent to a scared scream she rushed upstairs to her mistress with a disjointed tale of highway-men. "Believing," "Mistress" decided to see for herself and, of course, immediately recognized a member of the local police. Fitialy explanations were arrived at, which included an earlier request to the maid for a messenger, whereupon the wrong knob was turned by the servant with the results as outlined. It was eventually decided to forget the entire matter and file it under the heading of "Misdirected Justice."

Cow-Catcher

Usually thought of as a contraption in front of old-time steam engines which brushed lazy cattle off the track, the term has acquired an entirely different meaning this season in Monmouth County. Each fall sees more and more farms placarded with the little signs supposed to tell hunters to run around to some other location. Sometimes they are heeded—sometimes not. For instance Edward Schimmel, a dairy farmer of Leonardo, believing in the doctrine of contented cows, proceeded to post his acres against gunners' invasion. He just didn't want his cows upset, especially as it was about calving time for some of them. He had no real idea that the current crop of buckshot poppers couldn't tell the difference between a cow and a rabbit. But anyway his missed one of his best cows. For four or five days he hunted for the animal, eventually finding the poor thing where she had dragged herself to die in a thicket with a gaping wound in her side. Mr. Schimmel suggests that the marksman to blame for the atrocity might better go back practicing on the broad side of a barn, have his eyesight tested, stop trying to make little things out of big ones (i. e. rabbits on cows) or, best of all, tie a nice blue ribbon on his blunderbuss and hang it on the wall out of harm's way.

They say ill-luck never comes singly and this Middletown dairyman also has proved this maxim anew. Not even over-tempting the loss of his fine cow, a few days later he heard a keifer bellowing with pain in a far pasture. Hastening in the direction of the disturbance, he found one of his fine young animals had been chased by a couple of hunting dogs, become mired in crossing a brook and so unable to defend itself was left utterly at the mercy of the blood-thirsty canines who were literally tearing the poor bovine to bits. The dogs were strangers, probably belonging to some visiting nimir, but the fact remains that for the second time this season they accounted for another cattle casualty in the Schimmel herd.

Collage Cycle

Every now and then some new sight or incident of the "Pioneers of Improvement," those fast-becoming-legendary figures of 80 years ago, whose chief aim in life seemed to be to establish Long Branch as the premier resort of the Jersey coast, comes to light. Now it is an article from the New York Tribune of 1884 which tells of the conditions hereabouts 25 years earlier when John Hoey first came to Long Branch. At that time there were but four cottages here and the doughty little express executive was able to buy entire farms in the section which captured his fancy for an average price of around $100 an acre. Some of that same land, within the quarter-century covered, Hoey sold for as high as $6,000 an acre—but even then under protest and only to permit his use of the proceeds to make still more beautiful his "Hollywood Paradise." The Tribune correspondent goes on to recount that in the same lapse of time Hoey saw those original four cottages spread and stretch out in almost unbroken line of dwellings as far as Highlands. Many a home costing $100,

THE SITUATION OF THE SAAR BASIN

900 or more was built. A double-track railroad arrived with a special Long Branch station for Hoey, of course, called "Hollywood." This writer of the '80's even gives credit for the south-swinging shore development from Asbury Park to Atlantic City to the impetus given to Jersey seaside migration by the enthusiasm of the little "Emperor of Hollywood" for the beauties and advantages of his "pet" coastline.

A BOOK A DAY

CRAWLED INTO CAVE TO CATCH VAMPIRES

Ditmars Tells of an Eerie Job in His New Book

By BRUCE CATTON

Raymond L. Ditmars, the energetic gentleman who rounds up and looks after all kinds of creeping and crawling things for the Bronx Zoo, is as full of good stories as a traveling salesman—not the same sort of stories, of course. Every so often he lets some of his stories bubble over into a book, and the book is usually very interesting. His newest one is "Confessions of a Scientist," and it makes fine reading.

Here you may learn how Dr. Ditmars went on a rather appalling hunt for vampire bats in the Panama jungles—he had to crawl into eerie caves where the walls were alive with horrible insects and the ceilings were festooned with thousands of bats—and how he brought one of these blood-thirsty little animals back to New York and made a detailed study of it.

He also tells of chasing rattlesnakes over rocky hills in the Berkshire, of the difficulties of getting the deadly African mamba to pose for the moving picture camera, and of the things that can happen when you go hunting for the bushmaster in Central America.

His book incidentally contains an amazing account of a new medical experiment by which venom of the cobra is used to reduce cancer. This work is still in its early stages, but enough has been done to indicate that a most promising field for research has been opened here. Dr. Ditmars gives a graphic description of it.

Published by Macmillan, the book sells for $3.50.

Daily Health Talks

By DR. MORRIS FISHBEN

Editor, Journal of the American Medical Association, and of Hygiene, the Health Magazine.

There was a time when between 250 and 300 babies out of every 1000 born in certain large cities of the United States died before they were one year old. With the advance of modern medical science these rates have been greatly reduced, so that the average rate for 955 cities in 1933 was 57.1.

Since the previous year, cities of Texas and South Dakota have been added to the birth registration area. If only those cities which were in the birth registration area in 1932 are compared with those for 1933, the rate for last year is 55.9—the lowest ever recorded in the history of this country.

This is highly significant, because the period was one of financial emergency and financial depression, with many people on relief.

Furthermore, health authorities believe that the infant mortality rate is a good measure of medical and public health effort. It means that, even during the financial depression, medical and public health officials have held their own in the battle against disease.

It is of great significance to realize that Portland, Ore.; Seattle, Wash., and Oakland, Calif., have for several years been among the first with the lowest infant mortality rates. In 1933 the rate for Portland was 33, and for Seattle and Oakland, 38.

Smaller cities, such as Fort Wayne, Ind.; Long Beach, Calif., and Tacoma, Wash., report rates of 33 and 35. Among cities of 50,000 to 100,000 population, Berkeley, Calif., and Newton, Mass., have death rates of 21, and San Jose, Calif., a rate of 23.

In contrast with these enviable records, Memphis, Dallas, and Atlanta have the highest rates among cities of over 250,000; namely, 112, 86, and 83; El Paso, San Antonio, and Chattanooga have the three highest among cities from 100,000 to 250,000; namely, 125, 113, and 89. And Charleston, W. Va.; Montgomery, Ala., and Huntington, W. Va., have the highest rates for cities of from 50,000 to 100,000; namely, 131, 110, and 108.

not, of course, disparaging the exposition's value. But it does seem strange that more people do not go to the Metropolitan Museum of Art—free on some days—where every sort of the world's finest treasure is to be seen.

When the American fleet anchored around Manhattan last summer, sweltering throngs stood in line day after day to board the ships. It probably hadn't occurred to any of these people that they could take a subway over to the Brooklyn Navy Yard, any day in the year, and see plenty of ships and sailors.

For years there have been examples of shrewd sideshowmanship in the itinerant zoos which move into vacant stores in the Broadway sector. They represent themselves as propagandists for the preservation of wild life, and request donations. Exhibits usually include a discouraged raccoon, a moth-eaten fox or two, a somnolent possum and a few frantic squirrels. Most of the citizens who contribute to these diabolical frauds wouldn't think of visiting the Bronx or Central zoos, without charge, to see fine specimens of practically all the world's rarest animals.

And then there are tourists who painstakingly study every stone and window in foreign cathedrals. Back in New York, though, they devote not the slightest attention to the Gothic marvels of St. Patrick's, or the unmatched magnificence of Riverside Church.

In New York

By PAUL HARRISON

NEW YORK. — Thanksgiving time is, per se, a season in which even a Gotham scriverer should think of something to be thankful about.

And so ... I'm thankful that there are 30 plays on Broadway, with 10 hits that are doing a whopping business; which must be a sign of something ... I'm grateful for the awesome view from a Staten Island ferry, and for the outlook from both the major midtown sky-towers ... It's nice to know that Professor Hecker still is prospering with his flea circus. And that the cat in Shubert Alley got along all right with her quintuplets.

I'm glad that I've never failed to thrill a little at a nightly peep through the Times Square kaleidoscope ... I'm thankful for the soup at Miyako's, the snugs at El Chirito, the coffee at Dave's Blue Room ... I'm cheered by the insouciance of chorus girls who trip along Broadway in their almost-genuine silver foxes and mink coats. And by the gallant courage and unflinching pride of jobless showfolk.

When Winter Comes

There's some comfort in the assurance that there'll be bread for the breadlines. And that police will not interfere too much with the vacant-lot "jungles" where unemployed men house their self-respect in packing boxes ... I'm thankful for the staunch idealism of hundreds of the lesser actors whose names never appear in lights. And, of course, for the accepted masters of theatrical magic—the Katharine Cornells, Eva Le Gallienne, Walter Hustons, George M. Cohans and others who hold to high purpose ... I'm glad that this is the sort of town where one can feed apples to policemen's horses without feeling like a sap.

It's nice to contemplate the lush bounty of overflowing markets. And to watch the eager faces in the long ticket lines at the Hippodrome, where low-priced grand opera is offered ... Maybe I imagine it, but the terse crowds seem smaller in front of the employment agencies on Sixth Avenue ... I'm glad that Apple Annie got to be a lady-for-a-day before she died ... And grateful that night clubs have only one master-of-ceremonies apiece ... I'm thankful that snow soon will come to mute the harsh sounds of the city, and to blanket some of its unsightliness.

Suckerville

As they used to say while twisting around old adages, proximity lends disenchantment. New Yorkers, I believe, have less appreciation of their town's substantial advantages than the civic-minded folk of the smallest hamlet.

For example, when a Fine Arts Exposition, complete with ballyhoo, comes to Rockefeller Center, thousands flock into it, leaving good cash money at the gate. I am

Looking Backward Upon Long Branch

25 YEARS AGO

Charles Wimpheimer and J. Addison Woolley, wealthy summer residents of this city, were among the Thanksgiving donors to Monmouth Memorial Hospital. The former gave $1,000, and Mr. Woolley contributed a new operating table.

Ira Miller, Chaitie High School's dependable fullback, was elected captain of the 1910 football team at the meeting of the squad held yesterday.

John Brazo, of Broadway, was a patient at the Monmouth Memorial Hospital, where he underwent an operation this morning.

Former Postmaster Japhia Van Dyke, of Westwood Avenue, returned from a Pine Brook quail hunt yesterday with a dozen birds.

Edward Worthley, of this city, recently purchased the Arcana Avenue property of Lewis Layton in Oceanport.

Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Ripley, the former the well known artist with a studio in the West and Jeffrey Building here, had closed their residence and were planning to spend the winter in Jacksonville, Fla.

10 YEARS AGO

Thirty-five hundred local residents were to share in the $133,577.56 Christmas Club savings which were to be released by the local banks this week.

Commander Goldberg, head of Long Branch Post No. 44, American Legion, today invited all local residents to attend the annual meeting and installation of officers of the organization at the Post Home tonight.

Plans were being completed for the transforming of the old Chelsea Avenue merry-go-round into a roller-skating rink. Lyman Koch, of Alentown, the new lessee, announced today.

Mrs. Archibald Miller, wife of Mayor Miller, of Red Bank, who had been seriously ill, was reported slightly improved this morning.

Mrs. G. H. Sprague recently returned to her home here after a three months' visit with relatives in York, Pa.

The New Deal In Washington

By RODNEY DUTCHER

(Daily Record Washington Correspondent)

WASHINGTON.—The Munitions Committee, which made so much hair stand up by its revelations early this fall, is now dead broke. Loaded with new sensations after further months of exploration and excavation, the investigating senators, headed by Nye of North Dakota, will resume hearings Dec. 4 and call before them a new batch of celebrated practitioners in the "iron, blood, and profits" racket.

But its investigative staff, decimated to a wisp of its former strength by depletion of funds, will be serving without pay through December. Just before and during the first hearings in September the committee staff consisted of 18 investigators, 32 clerical workers, and a group of FEERA workers at the New York office.

There remain Secretary Stephen Raushenbush and six other investigators and a half dozen secretaries and stenographers, two of whom are about to go on half pay. Even the colored messenger has been released.

At the next hearings you'll learn that American manufacturers of machine guns are now operating their factories 24 hours a day and the committee probably will inquire whether the prospect of possible use against the unemployed is a factor in the boom as well as into sales methods and foreign markets.

The committee also has been edging closer to the activities of certain politicians in connection with munitions operations—and some of those boys may be on the griddle, too.

But the committee has only begun the task assigned to it. Hampered by lack of funds and personnel, it has yet to plunge into the secrets of certain other industries—steel, for instance—which maintain powerful undercover lobbies in Washington.

Friends of the investigation are set to combat anticipated secret efforts of such interests to block further appropriations. The committee began last May with a grant of $50,000, which has been spent for salaries, travel, official reporters, office rent, and the like.

Cocktail Books Vanish A great deluge of books containing cocktail and other mixed drink recipes poured into the Library of Congress, which receives two free copies of every book copyrighted.

But you can't find any of them on the shelves any more. The remnants of them are now tucked carefully away in the famous "Delta collection," where unexpurgated editions and such schoolboy prey as Latin ponies and answers to mathematical problems are reserved from the public.

The books were being spirited away in large numbers. Does Duty, Due for Ax Francis Gorman, textile strike leader, has forced action by the textile labor relations board against mill owners who have violated the strike settlement agreement by retaining strikebreakers and refusing to re-employ strikers.

For two months the board has relied on moral suasion to influence recalcitrant manufacturers, fearful of direct decisions against them. About 200 mills have ignored the suasion. Dr. Benjamin Squires, executive director of the board, is likely to be eased out soon as a result of his insistence during that period that the board act firmly.

Squires, who quickly hired a large corps of investigators and obtained large gobs of evidence, has overshadowed the three-man board headed by Judge Walter Stacy—partly because it has been off the job so much while also acting as the steel board. (The steel board had to take over the textile problem because so dozens of folks refused to serve on a separate textile board.)

The board is at last holding hearings and promising decisions. But it has the ax out for Squires.

What Other Editors Think

HOW, AND HOW SOON, WILL DOLES END?

Speculation is rife in some quarters—particularly among social workers, whose life is devoted to thinking about and dealing with such problems—as to whether there will be federal relief of the unemployed for much longer in the direct form in which this relief has become familiar.

At a recent gathering one prominent leader in the social service field predicted that within less than a year he expects to see the President advise Congress to abandon the present direct relief plan, which has already cost the nation more than a billion and a half dollars. Nothing official has yet come directly bearing upon this topic from the White House itself. But it is plainly contrary to the accepted philosophy and practical experience of a policy of handing out money for food or clothing or shelter without anything being done or given in return by the beneficiary except to stand in line waiting for the next hand-out. In his Chicago address Friday at the convention of mayors, President Roosevelt's director of federal relief made clear his own desire to improve upon this system at the earliest opportunity. He said: "I don't see why we should continue a day longer than necessary with the present relief system. I am convinced, as is the man in the White House, that the next Congress will solve the problem."

In New Jersey the State Relief Administration has already indicated that it is aware of the essential mistake involved in long continued free hand-outs. This is to be seen from the recent announcement that in so far as possible the state will encourage work relief or give in return by the beneficiary except to stand in line waiting for the next hand-out. In his Chicago address Friday at the convention of mayors, President Roosevelt's director of federal relief made clear his own desire to improve upon this system at the earliest opportunity. He said: "I don't see why we should continue a day longer than necessary with the present relief system. I am convinced, as is the man in the White House, that the next Congress will solve the problem."

Money paid out for direct relief, without any return of labor to the government, is certainly the kind of budgetary extravagance which ought to be stopped first of all. The CWA of last winter was entirely right in principle; its blenches were due to the haste with which the program was put into operation, giving the relief administrators of CWA millions of men in Hudson County, for example, overnight Supervisor John E. O'Neill found himself confronted with the job of putting 19,000 men to work. The wonder is not that there was so much waste but that there was so much useful work found for such armies of workers to do on such short notice.

Perhaps a more carefully planned combination of the CWA idea and the PWA idea will prove the solution of the nation's sorest and most pressing problem.— Jersey Journal.

HOFFMAN'S SECRETARY

Governor-elect Hoffman has gone the way of two predecessors, Governor Larson and Gov. Woodrow Wilson, in selecting a former legislator to act in the capacity of secretary. It was Mr. Wilson who saw in Joseph P. Timulty, a former Assemblyman, a young man of exactly the kind of experience needed to aid him in his lack of experience in the practical politics and the practical legislation at the State House. In later years Governor Larson picked former Assemblyman Thomas Hanson, and now Mr. Hoffman has selected former Senator Steiner.

Newspapermen and lawyers usually have been selected for this post which calls for a trained mind in meeting the public, and in contacting the newspapers, as well as in advising with the Governor. But the experience of the man who has served in the Legislature is an asset not to be taken lightly.—Hudson Dispatch.

FIREMEN RALLY AFTER DROPPING GAME TO NEPTUNE

West Long Branch Firemen Lose Three Straight to Allenhurst Alley Team

Long Branch firemen took two games out of three in their clash last night with the Neptune City plusters as another week of competition in the Shore Firemen's League rolled around.

The losers were plenty hot in the first contest, both Jamison and Wendt, Neptune stars, turning in brilliant 22's, the high score of the night, to swamp the Brancher smoke-eaters.

In other matches, Allenhurst took three straight from West Long Branch; Spring Lake No. One took two out of three from Spring Lake No. Two and the Ocean Grove Eagles dropped two out of three to the Deal No. One team.

FARLEY WILL OPEN 6-DAY BIKE RACE

High Class Field Will Face Starter's Gun in Garden Bowl

James A. Farley, Postmaster General, will fire the starting gun in New York's 57th international six-day bicycle race which will get under way tomorrow night at 9 o'clock in Madison Square Garden.

The field is made up of one of the strongest aggregations of professional riders ever to compete in a Madison Square Garden bicycle classic.

Among those of New Jersey who will compete are: Willie Grimm of Maplewood, and Freddie Spencer of Nutley; Leroy Garrison of Kearny, and Bobby Walthour of Woodbridge.

There will be five series of sprints each day in the race. The hours of the sprints will be 3:30 in the afternoon, 8:30, 10:30 and 12:30 at night, and the final series, each morning when the milkman is out, at 2:30.

SHREWSBURY WOMEN BEAT R. B. GIRLS, 1-0

RED BANK, Dec. 1.—The Shrewsbury Women's Field Hockey Club took a close contest from the Red Bank High School girls 1-0 at the local athletic field recently, defeating the school girls 1-0.

The player was Johnny Dorpich, regular quarterback, who, it was learned, was 20 years old last June. He had represented himself to the school authorities, they said, as having been 19 years old, but a careful check of all available records showed the discrepancy.

The team had won nine games this year, defeating Phillipsburg, Parochial, South River, Garfield, Asbury Park, Allentown, Pa., Plainfield, Trenton, Clifton and East Rutherford.

SCATTERED GAMES END GRID SEASON

Army-Navy, Boston College-Holy Cross, Georgetown-Western Maryland Meet

NEW YORK, Dec. 1.—(P)—Football's final salute to a thrill-sated weather, prospects were for a capacity crowd of 80,000 for the 35th football duel of the service academies at Franklin Field in Philadelphia.

In the South, main interest centered on the clash of Louisiana State and Tulane, both undefeated within the Southeastern Conference and hoping to gain a share of the title with Alabama's undefeated and untied Crimson Tide, already nominated for Rose Bowl duty against Stanford New Year's day.

The Cats' opponents will be the Holy Name gridmen from Essex County and from past performances of the visitors the West End eleven should get enough competition to fully prepare them for their future drive for the crown.

The Holy Name squad, according to reports preceding the team, have taken the measure of such teams as the Bloomfield Scholastics by a score of 7-6 and the St. Lucius team of Newark, 35-0, a team which the Wildcats rolled over by a 25-0 count.

The Cats appeared to be in the best form of the season last Sunday when they trounced the Setonham Democrats, 27-0, and Coach William P. Beatty expects to have them in the same shape for tomorrow's engagement. The game is scheduled for the old Hollywood Horseshoe grounds at West End, at 2:30 o'clock.

SAMMY FULLER PUTS JADICK OUT IN 4TH

NEW YORK, Dec. 1.—(P)—Sammy Fuller, sturdy little Boston fighter who started an upheaval among New York boxing officials when he dropped a strange decision to Young Peter Jackson, a couple of weeks ago, apparently has no intention of letting such things happen again.

Fuller put Jackson on the floor three times but the judges called the decision against him. Last night he came back and flattened Johnny Jadick, rangy Philadelphia welter, three times in one round and did it so thoroughly that he won on a technical knockout in the fourth round.

He hit Jadick so hard with a left that the thump of the Philadelphia's head on the canvas might have been a signal that it was all over. Jadick managed to get up twice but the referee intervened as Fuller smashed him into the ropes.

Fuller, just too big to be a lightweight, weighed 138 1-2. Jadick a quarter pound less.

80,000 Fans Will See Clash of Service 11s in 35th Annual Game

Wet Field Is Likely to Hamper Middies More Than Heavy Army Backs

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 1.—(P)—Army and Navy, brothers in defense of national security, turned on each other in play today, and Franklin Field shared with the country, with ships at sea from China to Suez, with every soldier outpost from Alaska to Hawaii, the excitement and glamour of the 35th football duel of the services.

If there was anything in signs it was a day for Navy, for there was water everywhere, rain that had fallen for 48 hours on admirals and generals alike on the Secretaries of War and Navy, on government officials of high and low degree, all part of the 80,000 that had taken over the city, jammed its hotels and tangled its traffic, for the annual climax of the regular football season.

There wasn't a seat to be had in the huge horseshoe stands, sold out weeks ago, and despite the threat of showers all day, speculators, with only a few hundred tickets to start with, commanded whatever price they cared to ask. Bids of $50 for a single ticket were common.

Middies Favored, 7-5 For the first time in years, the Midshipmen from Annapolis, headed by their brilliant ball carrier, passer and defensive star, Fred "Buzz" Borries, of Louisville, Ky., were favored, though as slight as 7 to 5, to break the spell the Army Cadets have woven around the classic since 1921, when Navy last won one, 7 to 0, in New York. In the 10 games played since then, with a two-year fracture of relations in 1928 and 1929, the West Point cadets have won eight times. Navy managed to achieve a scoreless tie in 1923, and a hysterical 21-21 deadlock in Chicago in 1926.

Army looked with calm confidence on conditions that enhanced, if anything, the Cadets' chances of wiping out the fall's defeats by Illinois and Notre Dame in the satisfaction of a sixth straight conquest of Navy. While the Army's ace, "Texas" Jack Buckler, is not in the best of condition for a ball carrying duel with Borries, the Cadets outweigh Navy an average of over 6 pounds to a man, an important factor on a wet day. Neither eleven has a real injury.

Navy, walloped only by Pittsburg so far, has built its entire attack around Borries, a general attack for this year's all-America. Army's offensive is far more varied. While Borries does the vital passing, the climax running, the plunging, and leaves only the kicking for fullback Bill Clark. Army has a fine plunger, defensive and blocking star in captain and fullback, Joe Stancook, and a running and passing champion to Buckler in Ed Grove, right halfback, as well as more capable replacements.

So, the Midshipmen wanted firm turf for Borries swift feet under the tarpaulins that were stretched over Franklin Field as soon as Pennsylvania and Cornell finished their Thanksgiving Day game. Pools of water soaked in the canvas, but attendants said the playing surface was "fair."

On a line drawn through scores of the Navy-Notre Dame game, which Navy won 10 to 6, and the Army-Notre Dame game, which Notre Dame won 12 to 6, the crack eleven Tom Hamilton has walked together in his first year as Navy's head coach seems to hold all the advantage. Navy gained only a third as much ground as Notre Dame did, however, while Army's running attack seemed fully equal to that of the Ramblers from South Bend. Football coaches, most of whom come to Army-Navy games, if they can get tickets, like baseball managers go to World Series, agreed the match was a toss-up.

Watch Cutter Army's brilliant ends, Bill Shuler and Norman Edwards, were watched by Navy's outstanding tackle, Slade Cutter and Dick Lambert. The guards were matched off, with Navy's captain, Dick Burns, pitted against Bob Sullivan, one of the best offensive linemen in the country. If there was any advantage at center it was conceded to Louis Robertshaw, the Sailor-pivot, lighter, but more experienced than Tom Clifford, his opponent across the scrimmage line.

Kicking honors were considered about even, with Bill Clark, Navy fullback, capable of matching Buckler's long boots. The corps of cadets, from West Point, and the regiment of midshipmen from Annapolis, were scheduled to arrive here about noon for the traditional parade before the start of the game at 1:30 P. M. (EST). The teams were hidden away at opposite sides of the city, Army 30 miles south in New Jersey, Navy 20 miles to the north.

The probable starting lineups: Pos Army Navy LT. Shuler Dorain LG. Brearley Burns (C) RB. Clifford Robertshaw RB. Sullivan Zabriskie RT. Deal Cutter RB. Deal Mandelkorn QB. R. Edwards Mandelkorn QB. R. King Pratt LT. Buckler Borries RB. Grote T. King FB. Stancook (C) K. Clark

Officials: Referee W. J. Crowl, Swarthmore; Umpire T. J. Thorp, Columbia; Linesman W. M. Hollerbeck, Pennsylvania; Field Judge C. M. Waters.

ALABAMA TOUGH FOE FOR STANFORD

Southern Teams Have Always Been Tough for West in Rose Bowl

PASADENA, Calif., Dec. 1.—(P)—Western football fans who lay much store by their Rose Bowl defenders reviewed the situation today and suddenly realized Stanford had invited itself a peck of trouble when it named Alabama as an opponent New Year's Day.

The Crimson Tide has yet to taste defeat in the Rose Bowl after three appearances here. Stanford has fared rather badly in the classic, losing twice getting one tie and winning once by a single point.

Whether the present combination from Palo Alto is better than that which tied the Bama boys 7 to 7 in 1927 remains to be seen. And there is the pertinent question of whether the Crimson Tide is better, as it appears to be.

On the shoulders of Coach Tiny Thornhill's men also rests the job of trying to cut into the impressive list of wins Southerners have piled up in the intercollegiate battle.

The South boasts a 3 to 1 edge in games won and lost over the West in the 19-year-old event. The victories stand at one each for the West and Midwest while the East is on the short end of a 6 to 2 count. Two of the South's wins were turned in by Alabama at the expense of Washington in 1925, 24 to 0, in 1931—Georgia Tech beat California in the other game.

Margaret Gorey Describes Her Experiences in Orient

Senior Council Will Convene

Following its regular business meeting presided over by the president, Mrs. William K. Campbell, of Long Branch, the Women's Auxiliary of the Monmouth County Medical Society heard an interesting and vivid description of China, its people and their customs. The quarterly meeting was held at the Garfield-Grant Hotel and was preceded by luncheon in the solarium. The speaker of the afternoon was Miss Margaret Gorey of Monmouth Memorial Hospital who told of her four years' experience in China. The vastness of the country, the climate, language, and the money were discussed generally and then Miss Gorey limited her subject to Peking and presented a colorful picture of the personal lives of the Chinese in that city, their customs and everyday habits.

What Has a Man the Right to Expect From His Wife?—Drive Adolescent Girls With Firm but Gentle Rein and Leave Rest to Providence, Dorothy Dix Advises

DEAR MISS DIX—Not long ago you wrote ten commandments about what a woman has a right to expect of her husband. If a man has to work and provide a home and then be an angel on top of it, will you please state what a husband has a right to expect from his wife? C. P. D.

Answer: A husband has a right to expect love and tenderness and appreciation from his wife. He has a right to expect her to give daily and hourly indication that he is something more than a meal ticket to her. Women are always waiting about being heart-hungry, about having husbands who never pay them a compliment or give them a kiss that isn't just a peck of duty or manifest any sign of affection.

Heart-hunger is not an exclusively feminine complaint. Men suffer from it just as much as women do. Husbands want to be petted and fussed over and made much of just as much as wives do, and every husband has a right to expect his wife to make all of his work and sacrifices for her worth while by being just as much a lover after marriage as she was before.

He has a right to expect his wife not to throw away the bait which she caught him. This goes not only for personal appearance, but for the way she treats him. Before marriage she kept herself dolled up and easy on the eyes else he would have never picked her out for a wife. Before marriage she gave him to understand that she regarded him as an oracle. She was amiable and pleasant to get along with and put his pleasure before her own.

After marriage he has a right to expect her still to keep herself looking neat and pretty and to treat him with the same consideration that she did before marriage. If she goes slovenly and doesn't think it worth while to dress up for husband, and if she becomes peevish and fretful and fault-finding, she is nothing but a cheat who has got goods under false pretenses.

A husband has a right to expect his wife to be a good housekeeper and make him a comfortable home. That is her part of the bargain just as much as supporting the home is his.

When a man marries he puts his happiness, his prosperity and his health in his wife's hands. No man can be happy unless he goes home at night to a clean and orderly home that is filled with the spirit of peace and cheerfulness. No man can prosper unless he has a wife who is thrifty and economical and a good manager, for, as the old proverb says, "a woman can throw more out of the back door with a teaspoon than a man can put in at the front door with a shovel."

And no man can be healthy unless he is properly fed. Whether a man is able to stand up under the strain of modern business competition and win out or whether he is a physical wreck at 40 depends mainly upon the way his wife keeps house and the kind of meals she sets him down to. Bad cooking is just as legitimate an excuse for divorce as is failure to support.

A husband has a right to expect his wife to accept marriage with common sense. After all every girl knows when she gets married that it is the end of her playtime and it is settling down to the real business of life. There will be hard work in it. There will be deprivations. Sacrifices must be made. But the woman knows all of this before she ever enters matrimony. And the husband has a right to expect her to have character and courage enough to take whatever knocks she gets on the chin and not howl because marriage isn't a perpetual petting party or consider herself a martyr because she has to keep house and bear children.

A husband has a right to expect his wife not to offer him up as a sacrifice on the altar of his children. He has a right to expect her to give him as much time and attention and affection as she does to the baby and not to regard him after the first child is born as nothing but a slave to the children.

A man has a right to expect his wife to read and keep abreast of the times, so that she may be a companion to him. He has a right to expect her to be as amiable and pleasant to him as she is to strangers, and to do her best to keep him glad he married her instead of making him wonder why he did it. DOROTHY DIX.

DEAR DOROTHY DIX—Will you please tell me how to handle girls just entering their teens? It seems so hard to decide just what they may do. Some of the girls at this age nowadays think it is right to use cosmetics and manure their nails, but I do not approve of it. A MOTHER.

Answer: I don't think Solomon himself could tell you just how to handle adolescent girls in this age in which all of the old formulas for rearing children have gone into the discard, and when the youngsters simply snap their fingers at parental prohibitions.

It is certainly hard sledding for the mothers of young girls in these days, but the safest thing one can do is to steer a middle course between severity and laxness, and to try to keep from bumping as often as she can into her children's modern ideas of their own importance and their right to decide things for themselves. In your day mothers commanded and children obeyed, but now Mother has to use all the finesse of a diplomat to inveigle her children into doing what she wants them to do.

Don't delude yourself into thinking that you can follow your mother's recipe for rearing children. That school of thought has been discarded. And there are two things to remember. One is that times and customs and points of view have changed and that many things you were not permitted to do as a very young girl are perfectly proper to do now. Bobbed hair and one-piece bathing suits would have been a scandal in your youth, but they don't cause comment now.

Also remember that modern life is a forcing house in which youth attains an early maturity. The girl of 13 now is as old in reality as you were at 16; she is as sophisticated, she has seen more and heard more than you had. She is really better fitted to take care of herself because she is more hard-boiled and disillusioned.

And still another thing to remember is that you can't keep your girls from doing what the other girls of their age are doing. They must live in their generation and nothing that you can say or do could change them.

So the best advice that I can give you is just to string along with your daughters the best you can. Don't try to drive them with too tight a rein. Give them all of the innocent pleasures that you can, but know where they go and with whom they go. Keep a close eye upon them, but don't let them feel that Mother's eye is always disapproving. Of course, they will have boy friends. See to it as far as you can that they know nice boys instead of the kind they pick up at the soda fountain.

As long as the worst thing they want to do is to use cosmetics let them go to the lipstick and the rouge box all they want. Of course, if it is silly and bad taste to paint up a baby face like a Jazazel, but there is no real harm in it. Better than thinking that Mother is trying to thwart them in everything they want to do. All that any mother can do for her daughters is just to try to steer them into the right path and pray God to take care of them. DOROTHY DIX.

Quick Supper for Party Day

Mixed Grill Can Be Fixed Before Going Out

The mixed grill requires only a few minutes to cook and can be laid out in the grill pan long before it is needed.

Tomorrow's Menu

BREAKFAST: Baked pears, cereal, cream, bread crumb pancakes, syrup, milk, coffee.

LUNCHEON: Stuffed baked potatoes, celery and apple salad, Boston brown bread, canned peaches, milk, tea.

DINNER: Grape fruit supreme, mixed grill, head lettuce with French dressing, apricot whip, crisp cookies, milk, coffee.

BY MARY E. DAGUE

(NYA—Daily Record Writer)

If my bridge club is planning an afternoon session that threatens to spill over into the dinner-preparing hour, I plan to have a mixed grill. It's quick to fix and so popular with my family that they don't complain about dinner being late.

In such a dinner all foods are served hot from the grill on a big dinner plate, or on the compartment plates that have journeyed from the club to the home.

In preparation, the grill pan is necessary. This is a shallow, oval pan, 15 by 10 inches. The foods are arranged in tiers and all cooked at once. Across the top of the pan, place the chops in a precise row, sear for five minutes under the broiling flame, then add a layer of pineapple and sweet potato, a row of sausages, the small link kind, tomatoes and mushrooms.

Prepare Before Party

Before I go to the party I brush both sides with French dressing seasoned with a split clove of garlic. The potatoes also are improved by this treatment.

Mushroom caps marinated in French dressing before cooking keep their color better.

Spread potato slices with a mixture of brown sugar and butter and put a slice of potato on each slice of pineapple, adding extra potato slices. The tomato should be cut in slices about 1-2 inch thick and lightly sprinkled with salt and pepper. Drop a bit of butter in each mushroom cap and prick each sausage.

Lower the flame or place the grill pan further below the flame. Cook 15 minutes, or until the vegetables are brown on one side. After turning, salt the other side of to-matoes and chops. Baste once or twice during the cooking with the juices in the pan. Cook 15 minutes longer and lay strips of bacon over rows of tomatoes. Cook until bacon is crisp.

Serve on each plate one chop, one sausage, one ring of pineapple, 2 slices potato and 2 slices tomato, 2 or 3 mushrooms and a slice of bacon. Garnish with a sprig of cress or a sprig of parsley.

How to Serve

Grapefruit supreme makes a splendid first course for a mixed grill dinner. Prepare the fruit in the morning and let it stand, closely covered, on ice until wanted for serving.

The salad for this dinner should be simple. Endive, escarole or lettuce with a French dressing furnishes just the right touch of crispness.

If there are no small children a coffee sponge finishes the meal to perfection but if the dessert is for a family of assorted sizes a fruit whip or a fruit gelatine with whipped cream is more suitable.

AEROTYPE ESSO

Cars GO for it!

THE OIL INDUSTRY'S LEADER SCORES ANOTHER GREAT TRIUMPH!

Today's the day!

Aerotype ESSO . . the new motor car fuel . . is here!

And the 30,000 ESSO Dealers and Stations from Maine to Louisiana will celebrate its introduction!

NEW IN WHAT IT IS AND DOES

Aerotype ESSO is a radical departure in motor car fuel!

In extremely high anti-knock rating and general efficiency it resembles the powerful fuels used for flying!

In fact, it is modeled after U. S. Army Fighting Grade Aviation Fuel . . hence its name!

CASH REFUND GUARANTEED

Aerotype ESSO is offered on a MONEY BACK basis . . unconditionally GUARANTEED to SATISFY!

The world's leading petroleum organization stands squarely behind that guarantee!

BUY AT THIS SIGN This sign identifies the 30,000 Esso Dealers and Stations from Maine to Louisiana, who represent the products and services of the world's leading oil organization.

Give Aerotype ESSO a chance to prove—

.. that it is the "fastest firing," quickest-starting motor car fuel you've ever used!

.. that it attains peak performance efficiency in less time and with less "warm up"!

.. that sub-zero weather does not faze it.. nor do sudden changes of temperature or altitude!

.. that it has more power . . more "anti-knock" . . not even the slightest "ping" under the hardest pull!

.. that its acceleration and get-away excel anything you've previously experienced!

IN SHORT, that for luxury, comfort, and trouble-free operation Aerotype ESSO surpasses any other motor car fuel you've ever used!

TEST IT IN YOUR CAR

A premium fuel, Aerotype ESSO costs 2c a gallon more than regular gasoline!

If your tests fail to prove that Aerotype ESSO is ALL we represent it to be . . you will receive a CASH REFUND of the premium you paid for it!

In other words, if Aerotype ESSO fails to satisfy you it will have cost no more than regular gasoline to try it!

Fill up with Aerotype ESSO. A new motoring experience awaits you!
